POLICE DECLARE NEW YORK MAN IS 'JACK LEONARD'

Sensational Developments in Cambridge Bank Looting Case Expected to Follow Arrest of "Straussneider" in Gotham. Admits Knowing Coleman and Keliher.

The Federal authorities of Boston believe that in the arrest of James Straussneider, who was held to-day in $25,000 bail in Brooklyn, they have caught "Jack Leonard," one of the alleged principals of the faro gang that fleeced George W. Coleman out of the greater part of the $310,000 he stole from the Cambridge City National Bank.

Straussneider was arrested at the instance of the office of United States District Attorney French. He is charged with aiding and abetting Coleman in the wrecking of the bank and with being a fugitive from justice.

REPORTED COLEMAN IDENTIFIED "LEONARD."

The government regards the arrest of Straussneider to be as important as the arrest of "Big Bill" Kelliher, now on trial on the charge of helping Coleman rob the bank. It was said to-day by one in close touch with the case of the government that Coleman had identified a picture of Straussneider as that of the mysterious 'Jack Leonard," who got him back into the faro game after he had quit it a loser of only $30,000 of the bank's money. Through Leonard and Kelliher, Coleman has testified, he lost $210,000 of the stolen funds.

In an interview in Brooklyn to-day, according to a leased wire dispatch to the BOSTON AMERICAN, Straussneider's wife, reported to be worth a million dollars, said:

"I told my husband that he would get into trouble if he associated with 'Big Bill' Kelliher."

Mrs. Straussneider made a great fuss when she learned that her husband was under arrest. He had been taken to his home to change his clothing. Turning to his wife when she made the remark he said:

"Now, don't you kick into this. They have nothing on me. I know Kelliher and I met Coleman in Boston. Kelliher introduced me to him, but I didn't have anything to do with trimming him."

The Losing of Thousands.

According to Coleman's story on the witness stand, Frank Draper introduced him to "Jack Leonard," and that "Jack" passed him on to Kelliher. Coleman had lost a lot of money, he said, with "Jack Leonard" before he met Kelliher. "Jack" told Coleman, the latter said, that it had been fixed so that Kelliher, who was a rich man, would beat the New York faro game for an immense sum, that he would give "Jack" $50,000 of it and that "Jack" would hand it over to Coleman to pay back what he had lost. Coleman took his bait, hook and all, last May, and from that time

Two of the Fleetest Sprinters In Big Intercollegiate Meet

F. L. Ramsdell of Pennsylvania and R. C. Craig of Michigan, each won his trial heat of the 100-yard dash in the remarkable preliminary time of 10 1-5 seconds.

VERDICT SECOND DEGREE AFTER 21 HOURS

Guilty of murder in the second degree was the verdict rendered shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon in the trial of Mrs. Elizabeth G. Richmond, charged with the murder of Stewart McTavish at Hotel Richmond, East Cambridge, last Summer.

The jury was out twenty-one hours.

Up to 2 o'clock this afternoon the jury had been out twenty one hours with no agreement in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth G. Richmond, charged with the murder of Stewart MacTavish.

The jury went to breakfast at 7 o'clock this morning, returning to the jury room in East Cambridge Court House an hour later. Time dragged slowly, with no signs from the jury room.

At 9:45 Judge Dana called the jury out and urged it to reach a verdict. His Honor said:

"Personal opinion should have no weight in a case like this. You should decide on the evidence. I wish you to go back now and try to reach a verdict on the evidence."

The jury retired to its room again. At 11 o'clock Judges Dana and Crosby left the Court House to go to Boston for a brief time.

Mrs. Richmond spent the night in the East Cambridge Jail, rear of the court room, where she might be called instantly. Once during the night she was taken into the court room when the jury came in from its deliberations for further instructions. Mrs. Richmond showed the great strain under which she was laboring.

Jury Feels Strain.

The strain was also evident upon the jurors. When they had filed into the court room and had taken their seats, Juror Murry leaned forward in his chair, bowed his head on the rail before him and appeared to weep. His body shook for some time as though he were sobbing.

The instruction sought by the jury was in regard to what constituted a reasonable doubt. Foreman Fiske put the question to Judge Crosby. It was this: "If a juror believes an opportunity was afforded to some other person than the defendant to commit the crime, does not constitute a reasonable doubt?" Judge Dana answered the question by repeating part of his charge. In it he said that opportunity for another person to commit the crime did not constitute reasonable doubt unless it resulted in creating a reasonable doubt in the jury's mind."

The summons from the jury room caused considerable scurrying to reach the judges and Mrs. Richmond. In the great crowd gathered about the court houses it resulted in the rumor that the jury had reached a verdict. The people thronged into the court room.

Woman Sees Hope Ray.

Mrs. Richmond was brought over from the court room, accompanied by Sheriff Fairbairn. She waited patiently while the jury filed in. Her face was seen to pale slightly as Foreman Fiske stood up; then her look changed to one of disappointment as she realized that they had not agreed. Her counsel seemd to gather hope from the question raised by the jury, and he communicated this to Mrs. Richmond, for her face brightened after Lawyer Glong whispered to her a few minutes later.

The unusual spectacle of a woman fifty years old on trial for her life drew a large crowd to the court room. Most of the throng lingered late into the night in the hope that a verdict would be reached. At midnight there were still a few hundred about the court building. At that hour the court officers cleared the building, but many of the crowd hung about the streets outside after the court building had been locked.

MOVE TO RAISE PAY IN U. S. NAVY YARDS

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Winthrop to-day ordered that special boards of officers be created, one for each navy yard, to inquire into the wages paid skilled employes of commercial plants. Steps will be taken, it is said, to secure the necessary increased salary for the men and thereby put them on a par with employes in private shipbuilding concerns.

REFUSE MINERS' DEMANDS.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Illinois coal operators decided to-day to stand pat against the demands of the miners. Resolutions were adopted declaring that if the miners within a reasonable time do not accept the proposition offered at the Peoria convention a "fight to a finish" will be declared.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, May 28.—The grounds were heavy from rain when the Athletics and the Speed Boys lined up for the first game of the series, but the damp seats and soggy playing field did not stop the big crowds from getting up to the park, as the game with the Quakers was put down as the best on the card since the home team opened up on the local links.

The Quakers, with five games tucked away, the whole number played with the Rex Sox, certainly had all the best of it, and the time was at hand to get revenge on the Quakers for the setbacks received earlier in the season.

The fans bubbled over with confidence that the league leaders were in for a trimming, as the favorites were never going better to do some big killing, and Manager Donovan needed no urging tonic to make his charges get in the game with both feet.

Connie Mack, elated over the high standing of his team, and the defeats they had administered to the local band, had his hoodoo pitcher Krause warm up with the expectation of sending him in, while Joe Wood shook the wrinkles out of his arm.

$1,750,000 FIRE IN MINNEAPOLIS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 28.—A $1,750,000 fire destroyed six large factories in South Minneapolis early to-day. A large district was threatened and saved only by the arrival of additional fire fighting apparatus from St. Paul, following a call for aid. The oldest hotel in Minneapolis, the Sixth Avenue Hotel, was burned. There were many narrow escapes.

The J. I. Case Implement Company, The Waterbury Implement Company, The Pittsburg Plate Glass Co., and two machinery warehouses went up, and the St. Paul railroad yards were damaged.

One man, Christ Madison, was fatally hurt. All the buildings were in the block bounded by Sixth and Seventh avenues and Third and Madison streets.

HARVARD ATHLETES IN GAMES

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—Record-breaking performances were looked for to-day in the final session of the intercollegiate athletic championship meet on Franklin Field, with Pensylvania the favorite for first place and the second lying between Yale, Princeton and Harvard, according to the opinion of experts. The contestants to-day, who qualified at the preliminary meet yesterday, were divided as follows:

Pennsylvania, fourteen men; Yale, twelve; Heinrotin, twelve; Harvard, eleven; Cornell, eight; Michigan, six; Amherst, four; Syracuse, two; Wesleyan, two; Columbia, two; Rutgers, one; Colgate, one; Dartmouth, one; New York University, one; Hartford, one; Bowdoin, one.

Harvard men to-day were confident, in spite of their ill luck in having Foster go lame and Captain Little twist his ankle. One of the chief points of interest to-day was the hurdles, where a great struggle was predicted between Chisholm of Yale and Dwight of Princeton.

KAISER BLOOD POISON VICTIM

J. B. CONNOLLY GETS APOLOGY FROM LAWLER

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Oscar Lawler, the Interior Department's Assistant Attorney General, who wrote the draft of President Taft's letter, exonerating Secretary Ballinger, to-day sent to the Ballinger-Pinchot committee, to Christopher P. Connolly and to James B. Connolly of Boston, letters declaring that he had no intention of casting slurs on either Connolly.

While on the stand before the committee, he said James B. Connolly, a writer, whose articles have appeared in Collier's Weekly, which attacked Secretary Ballinger, had acted in a cowardly manner in the wreck of the liner Republic. Yesterday, James B. Connolly of Boston, sued Lawler for $20,000 for libel alleging that Lawler had confused him with another Connolly.

When the committee resumed its hearings to-day, J. J. Vertrees, counsel for Mr. Ballinger, resumed his argument. Mr. Pepper, attorney for Gifford Pinchot, followed with closing speech. Mr Vertrees spoke extemporaneously, having prepared no notes. He declared the fight on Mr. Ballinger to be "malevolent vociferation."

GLIDDEN SOARS 7,700 FEET ON 75-MILE TRIP

PITTSFIELD, May 28.—Charles J. Glidden and Jason S. Bailey of Boston, who ascended here in the balloon Massachusetts at 4:10 a. m., landed at Bethany, Conn., about thre hours later after traveling an air line distance of seventyfive miles.

An altitude of 7,700 feet was reached during the flight.

CURTISS BALKED BY WEATHER IN FLIGHT FOR $10,000 PRIZE

ALBANY, May 28.—The gale which for two days has been blowing through the foothills of the Catskills, balking Glenn H. Curtiss in his intention of starting the 150-mile aeroplane flight to New York for the $10,000 prize offered by a New York newspaper, was still blowing to-day and Curtiss was unable to make his start as planned. After looking over the prospects from his Rennssalaer Island Camp at dawn, he announced that the flight would have to be postponed.

From dawn until 8 o'clock, Curtiss "stood by" ready to start another trial trip, or to make the complete flight from Albany to New York. He automobiled from the Ten Eyck in the city to Rennssalaer Island just before the night shadows lifted. The first thing done was the complete inspection of his machine under the tent by lantern light. Satisfied with this, the man-bird took a look at the weather signs.

There appeared to be little or no breeze and in the midst of the rolled-out cabbage patch where the aeroplane rested the air was as sultry as in mid-summer. Reports from other points showed a stiff breeze blowing, however.

COMET COMING AGAIN TO-NIGHT IF IT'S CLEAR

After being in retreat for another evening Halley's comet is scheduled for a return date in Boston to-night.

The successful appearance of the comet Thursday night caused thousands of Bostonians to hope for another appearance last night. But the comet pulled several layers of cloud bank between itself and the earth.

To make it all the more aggravating, dispatches from New York to-day relate that the comet was on view most of the evening. The weatherman forecasts a fair night over Boston to-night. The sun sets at 7:10 this evening. The comet—IF no clouds butt in—should be visible from that hour till 11:10, at which time the comet goes to bed, so far as Boston is concerned.

The comet is now 53,000,000 miles from the earth or thereabouts.

NATIONAL LEAUE GROUNDS, Brooklyn, May 28.—After a long jump from Pittsburg the Doves faced the Trolley Dodgers in the first contest of the series that would wind up their trip abroad, and they were out to make the most of the present games with Dahlen's men after giving the top Western clubs all the trouble they wanted.

The Doves rated several notches above the Dodgers in class, as their standing showed, but the lowly team had a way of springing surprises and, with some of the good pitchers working in form for the veteran, Bill Dahlen thought he could put one over on his friend Fred Lake before the clashes were over.

PRODUCERS TO RENEW DEMAND IN MILK WAR

Officers and some of the members of the Milk Producers' Association met informally at the American House to-day and discussed the report of the Legislative Committee on Milk. The officers said they would later to-day issue a statement on the report.

They said that the best thing in their favor in the report was that the committee found that the farmer could not produce milk at less than 4 cents a quart and that that price did not represent any profit to him.

Say Strike Will Continue.

On the strength of this report it was arranged for the officers of the association to see the contractors to-day and reiterate their demand for a continuation of the Winter price for milk—the price practically that was reported by the committee.

While no one would come out and say so, it was apparent from the talk of some of the officers that they were somewhat disappointed in the statement of the committee that the public should not pay any more for milk than the present price. The officers seemed to feel that this would not tend to help them in their fight.

It was declared unofficially that the strike would be kept up. Those who are at the hotel included Stanley H. Abbott, president; W. A. Hunter, secretary, and Vice-President Mills. Some of the members of the association who had come to Boston to get an insight into the battle that has been going on beween the farmers and the contractors left for home to-day.

In the milk report some of the points made by the committee are:

What Committee Reported.

Farmers can not produce milk at less than four cents a quart.

Five Boston firms handle 95 per cent. of milk in this city brought in by railroads.

The contractors have it in their power to fix the price of milk to consumers and to farmers.

Railroads should transport milk in iced milk cars for the same price to farmer and contractor.

The present retail price is enough to afford contractors a fair profit.

Boston milk is not properly inspected. A central inspection squad should be formed for the State.

ABANDON HOPE THAT ENTOMBED CREW IS ALIVE

CALAIS, May 28.—The submarine Pluvoise which was sunk in the English Channel Thursday afternoon with her crew of twenty-four men and three officers, has been re-located by divers. She is resting on the bottom of the channel far from the spot where she sank and where the tappings of her entombed crew were heard yesterday morning. There have been no more signals from the interior of the boat and all hope of finding any of the crew alive has been abandoned.

The divers are at work at the tremendously difficult task of cradling the Pluvoise in chains by which she may be lifted to the surface. This task, they expect to finish to-day.

The submarine was swept away from her first resting place at the bottom of the channel shortly after divers heard rappings. Swift undercurrents carried her hither and thither and her new location was not discovered for some hours. The divers who descended returned with the saddening news that they could discover no sign of life in the ill-fated craft. Admiral De La Peyrere who is in charge of the raising of the submarine has abandoned hope that any of the crew is alive. He wept with joy when divers reported yesterday that tappings had been heard from the interior of the vessel.

FIRE IN HOTEL PUT OUT UNDER SLEEPING GUEST

Fire smouldering in a mattress on the seventh floor of the Castle Square Hotel early to-day was extinguished before the man sleeping on the mattress woke up.

Listen to the direct testimony of the day clerk regarding the fire and the sound sleeper:

"It really wasn't much of a fire—in fact, it wasn't a fire at all, just a smouldering mattress.

"At 2 a. m. to-day a man came in and hired a room. He was given one on the seventh floor.

"He was smoking when he came in and he must have gone to bed and to sleep still smoking. The elevator man smelled smoke and told the night clerk. The night clerk sleuthed around. The smoke was so faint—just a smoulder of smoke y'know—that the night clerk had difficulty in locating it. Finally he traced it to this room.

"The room was entered. The man was asleep on the bed. Smoke was coming from the mattress, where the lighted cigar had fallen. The night clerk and the elevator man threw a little water on the smoulder and that was all. The man didn't even wake up. He was a regular sleeper.

"No, none of the other guests knew anything about it. The man hasn't come down yet. Yes, he probably is still sleeping. Yes, I think we can trim the Athletics this afternoon. Good day; don't mention it."

AUTOGRAPH OF JESUS FOUND?

VIENNA, May 28.—An autograph message of Jesus Christ to His people is said to have been found in a bric-a-brac shop here by a respected Jew citizen, who picked it up among a lot of old books offered for sale.

The manuscript is in the Hebrew language, and scholars versed in the ancient tongue who made a minute examination of it are said to have declared it genuine. The alleged manuscript has been photographed and will be sent to scholars throughout Europe. The original is on deposit in a Vienna bank.

HOLD AGED MAN FOR SHOOTING

George Carpenter, aged seventy, former night clerk of the Nashville House at No. 17 Cambridge street, West End, was arrested early to-day after he had fired two shots at Joseph Crowley, thirty-four, of No. 22 Causeway street, whom he alleged had tried to throw him out of the lodging house with the assistance of three companions. One of the bullets grazed Crowley's head, inflicting a slight wound. He was treated at the Relief Hospital.

Carpenter was standing in the office of the Nashville House talking to a friend when Crowley with three companions entered the door. The two soon became engaged in an argument that led to blows. Suddenly Carpenter, it is said, backed up against the wall and drew a revolver from his pocket which he pointed at Crowley and fired. The first shot went wide of the mark, but the second struck Crowley in the right side of the head and he dropped to the floor. Two policemen who heard the shots ran into the office and disarmed Carpenter, who was taken to the Joy Street Station.

Carpenter's face had been somewhat battered during the fight and the police surgeon took three stitches in his nose.

TWO ARRESTED IN TICKET PLOT

Officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad say that the arrest of two men, one of them a conductor, made by Boston police inspectors, are the first of several expected in connection with an alleged extensive theft of tickets, which the officials say has been going on for a long time. The railroad, it is alleged, has been robbed of a large amount of money through having its tickets stolen.

The conductor under arrest is Charles C. Ross, fifty, of No. 50 Salem street, New Haven. He had been in the employ of the road twenty-five years and is said to have received $43 a week salary. The other man arrested is Louis Allario, thirty-nine, a tailor employed at No. 3 Rochester street, Boston.

Conductor Ross is charged with the larceny of $119.70 from the New Haven Road, while Allario is accused of receiving tickets valued at $119.70. Railroad officials and the police allege Ross turned over stolen tickets to Allario, to be disposed of in Pleasant street pawnshops by the latter.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight, London Time

Tetrazzini to Sing in Boston, not New York.

LONDON—Louisa Tetrazzini, Hammerstein's greatest operatic soprano, will sing in Boston and Chicago next year, but will not appear in New York—unless Oscar Hammerstein becomes director of the Metropolitan Opera House. Arthur Hammerstein, who was called here by Director Dippel, has persuaded her to sign a contract, but she absolutely refused to sing for Gatti-Casazza in New York. Oscar Hammerstein, Gatti-Casazza and attorneys for the Metropolitan are to-day finishing up the work of transferring the Manhattan's contracts to the Metropolitan. Sammarco will also sing in the Metropolitan circuit, but not in New York.

Shaw Jars Count Tolstoi.

LONDON—G. B. Shaw, who regularly corresponds with Count Tolstoi, has given the aged Russian reformer a harsh jar by joking on a serious subject. Tolstoi asked Shaw to send him a copy of his "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet." Shaw sent him one with a letter in which, replying to Tolstoi's criticism that Shaw jests too much, he contended that humor is a divine attribute and for all he knew the universe might be a joke of the gods, in which case it was worth while to make it a good joke, not a bad one. Tolstoi was greatly startled and annoyed. He sent an acid reply, accompanied by a long dissertation on religion.

London Lauds Tenor Martin.

LONDON—Ricardo Martin, the Kentucky tenor, has won praise from the London press critics by his debut in "Madame Butterfly" at Convent Garden. The Mail says: "He is the possessor of a real tenor voice, which he used without the least trace of effort. The swell on the higher notes was employed with the most perfect artistry." The Morning Post says: "In the duet at the close of the first act he sang with immense fire, but without strenuousness and made his points by legitimate vocalization."

Fears for Alfonso's Life.

LONDON—Fears for the life of Alfonso, King of Spain, are felt throughout Europe. The young King looked very ill here at the recent royal funeral. It behooves his advisers, says the correspondent of the Daily Mail, to nurse the King's strength as much as possible and to prevent him from overdoing polo, hunting and other exaggerated sports, for his death would mean the end of his house and throne in Spain. The people would not stand another long regency, and Queen Victoria is not Queen Christina.

Drawings Bring High Prices.

LONDON—At a sale of drawings at Christie's Sir Hubert Herkomer's "Entranced in Some Diviner Mood of Self-Oblivious Solitude," which was exhibited at the Chicago exhibition in 1893, fetched $2,677.50. Moreland's "Credulous Innocence" went for $1,272.50 Hook's "Wily Angler" sold for $1,980. Nasmyth's "View in Surrey" brought the high price of $10,237.50.

Peru Again Moves Troops.

LIMA, Peru—The situation between Peru and Ecuador is again critical in spite of the acceptance of the meditation offer, and more Peruvian troops are proceeding northward. The feeling here is that war will break out in a very short time.

Bids for Allan Liner.

LONDON—The Allan Steamship Company has asked for tenders from big shipbuilders for the construction of a large steamer with a speed of 22 knots for service between Liverpool and Canada.

They are directed to use the money carefully and pay the widow the interest during her life.

The death of King Edward means complete retirement to Sir Felix, who is the one man in the world who could if he desired inform the public as to the real cause of King Edward's death. He declines to talk about the late King's death.

Chong met his bride in Canada, and came to Boston on the steamship Halifax. In all there were forty-six Orientals on the steamer. Mr. and Mrs. Chong are the first Chinese bridal couple that ever landed in Boston.

THREE DOCTORS AGREE.

That the Best Thing for Hair and Scalp Is Frequent Washing

Three of the leading authorities on the scalp and hair are Woods Hutchinson, M. D., and Dr J. C. Bayles of New York, and Dr. Lassar of Germany. It is remarkable that all three agree absolutely that the first and foremost thing to do in treating hair and scalp troubles is to keep the head clean by frequent washing. Dr. Lassar says that the first step in treating dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair is to keep the scalp clean by washing. Woods Hutchinson, M. D., says: "The main hope of stopping the advance of baldness lies in the direction of improving the general health and vigor, while at the same time keeping the scalp and hair in a clean, antiseptic, well ventilated condition. Avoid using too strong soaps, strong alkalis, such as ammonia and soda, and too hot water, as all of these take out too much of the natural lubricant, or oil, of the hair, and leave it dry and harsh." Dr. J. C. Bayles says: "The only thing the layman can do to avert baldness is to keep the head clean and cool." Modern thought is all in the direction of cleanliness. Hair that falls out, itching scalp and dandruff cannot be cured by fake tonics, renewers, growers and invigorators. The only sure way to benefit the hair and scalp is to keep them clean and free from dust and disease germs. For this purpose Birt's Head Wash, the new scientific preparation, is most highly recommended because it is made of Refined Soap, White of Eggs, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. Ask your doctor about it. Tubes 25c. jars 50c.

NEW CITY BEAUTIFUL RESULT OF MOVE TO BOOM SOUTH BOSTON

One result of the Boom South Boston movement, which is likely to differ from other "booms" is that it is meant to be permanent, is bound to be the building of a city clean and beautiful.

Letters written by residents of South Boston in the prize contest of the BOSTON AMERICAN invariably urge the necessity of brightening up rundown property, cleaning vacant lots, planting shade trees, building modern apartments, and similar ideas. South Boston, the City Clean.

These are all good suggestions.

What suggestion will you offer? How would YOU boom South Boston?

You need not be a resident of the district to compete for the gold offered by the BOSTON AMERICAN for the best seven suggestions. Study the problem, consider the wonderful natural advantages of this city within a city, advantages as a commercial centre, advantages as an industrial centre, and advantages as a home town. Contemplate her needs, and, in a letter to the BOSTON AMERICAN, answer this question:

How would you Boom South Boston?

For the best letter the BOSTON AMERICAN will pay fifty dollars in gold. To the author of the second best suggestion the BOSTON AMERICAN will pay twenty dollars in gold; to the author of the next best, ten dollars in gold. There are four additional prizes of five dollars each.

Press Acknowledges Help.

When the contest has closed, within a few days, the AMERICAN will turn the letters over to a Boom South Boston Committee, of which Mayor Fitzgerald is chairman. The judges will designate the most helpful suggestions. The BOSTON AMERICAN will cheerfully pay the money.

The enterprising weekly press of South Boston, publishing to-day, is quick to acknowledge the hearty support of the BOSTON AMERICAN in the Boom campaign. Says the Gazette:

"The Gazette, speaking for itself and the people of South Boston, takes this opportunity of acknowledging the voluntary indorsement and support by the BOSTON AMERICAN of the 'Boom South Boston' movement."

The South Boston Inquirer says:

"Many thanks to the BOSTON AMERICAN for the grand fight it is putting up for South Boston. The BOSTON AMERICAN shows its colors in true style. It comes to us in our hour of need."

These tributes, of course, belong to the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN. This newspaper is printing their suggestions, and asking for more. Say how you would Boom South Boston, and take five, ten, twenty or fifty dollars in gold.

Advantages Unexcelled.

South Boston ought to the busiest and happiest community of its size on the New England coast. Nature could do nothing for any community that it has not done for South Boston. Commerce? The sea lies all around her; the greatest railroad systems of the East are at her gates. Industry? Seventy thousand intelligent people. Homes? The metropolis of New England to draw from.

How would you make use of these advantages?

That is all there is to this problem. Answer the question.

Mr. Joseph F. Heron of No. 83 West Park street, Providence, R. I., writes us a letter to-day. These are Mr. Heron's suggestions:

Dear Sirs—In answer to the best way to make South Boston boom:

1. See that the city is kept clean.
2. Spend a little money making buildings look well.
3. Have good car service and to have the cars well painted.
4. See that the city is kept moral.

No. 83 W. Park St., Providence, R. I.

A School Girl's Thought.

Miss Irene L. Hines, a pupil in St. Augustine's High School, would make South Boston attractive to homeseekers. Miss Hines sees what nature has done for South Boston. She realizes that if man will do a little South Boston will be a far more beautiful place than many of the attractive suburbs that have been built up around Boston.

This letter from a school girl is extremely interesting. It's suggestions should be helpful to any community. She says:

Dear Editor—South Boston has many natural advantages. We have a superb water front, which could be used to make our section a great commercial centre. If docks, like the East Boston docks, and fish wharves, were built on the Commonwealth flats, people would flock to South Boston. They would naturally patronize her stores and increase her population. But these people would want quicker means of transportation. A car line should be run from Boston over Summer street extension to L street; another line over Cove Street Bridge, and a third over Northampton street from Roxbury.

Our section, to invite prospective residents, should be beautiful. Shade trees, such as maples or oaks, should be planted along Broadway and Dorchester street. They would greatly enhance the loveliness of these streets. Residents who might otherwise move to prettier suburbs would than stay at home. The new boulevard, along the bed of the Old Colony Railroad, offers great opportunities to real estate dealers. Beautiful new apartment houses could be built to replace the barns and dilapidated houses which now ornament this road. In five years it could be as handsome a street as would be found in Boston.

South Boston has the best public baths along the Atlantic Coast and Marine Park is the only one of its kind in the city. Magnificent views in all directions may be had from Dorchester Heights and the adjacent streets.

Every South Bostonian loves his native city and therefore should seek to have a "bigger, better, busier, more beautiful" South Boston.

(Signed) IRENE L. HINES,
St. Augustine's High School, S. Boston.
No. 20 Loring street, South Boston.

There are no puzzles in this contest. Nobody is asked to find the missing this, that, or the other. You need not draw a picture, or attempt fine writing. Answer the question in your own way and in your own words:

How would you Boom South Boston?

BOSTON PRIEST IN FIRST MASS

The pretty chapel of St. Elizabeth's Hospital on West Brookline street was the scene to-day of the celebration of his first mass by the Rev. Patrick J. Higgins, who was ordained to the priesthood last Saturday by Bishop Monahan at Little Rock, Arkansas.

During the mass Sister Mary Veronica, aunt of the young priest, presided at the organ and the music was rendered by the usual choir of sisters and nurses. Rev. H. F. Blunt of St. Peter's, Dorchester, gave benediction after the mass.

Seated in the sanctuary were many relatives of the newly ordained priest. Among them were Father Swift of Worcester, Father McDonough of Dover, N. H., Father McGinnis of the Paulist Order, New York, Father Kenney of the Holy Rosary, Father Crane of the Cathedral, Father Sheerin of the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, East Boston, and Father McGarry of St. Cecilia's Church, Back Bay.

MACHINISTS WIN EAST BOSTON FIRM

Frank Jennings, business agent of the Machinists Union No. 264, to-day received word from the Lockwood Manufacturing Company of East Boston that they had agreed to pay the wage scale as presented by the union, to take effect June 1. This company employs sixty men. Twenty other concerns about Greater Boston have also promised to advance the wage scale and prevent a strike. In all 300 men have received advances, leaving 4,700 to be considered or a strike will be ordered. A mass meeting has been called for Tuesday evening at Faneuil Hall to consider calling a strike unless the firms agree to meet the wage schedule.

The machinists have asked for a minimum wage scale of $3 a day for specialists; $3.50 a day for general machinists, and $4 a day for tool and die workers, for a nine-hour day.

GOVERNOR TELLS WHY HE GOES TO CHURCH

"I go to church regularly on Sunday, because I believe in the Unitarian religion, and expect to hear a sermon based on its principles.

"I don't go to church to hear politics discussed or to study economics, but to have my best feelings stirred, my religious knowledge improved, the best that is within me quickened, and to become a better citizen in consequence.

"Ministers who want political economy can go to the Legislature if they can get the votes necessary to take them there, but I want my Sunday services thoroughly religious and earnest."—Governor Draper at festival of American Unitarian Association at Tremont Temple.

URGE MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCE

The headquarters of the G. A. R. have issued their Memorial Day Reminder, in which they urge all people of the United States to forget their animosities and to join the country in giving a universal thankfulness for the united country and its flag.

They plead especially that the importance of Memorial Day shall not be forgotten, that its object is not one particularly of mourning but rather of thankfulness. The Reminder says: "It is not appropriate or respectful that the day should be devoted to sports and amusements."

CHILD THREE WEEKS OLD FOUND DEAD

John Egan, West Lynn section foreman of the Boston & Maine railroad, found the dead body of a three-weeks-old girl baby near the railroad tracks in the rear of Lowell street court, Lynn, early to-day. The body was wrapped in newspapers, there being nothing by which the identity of its parents might be determined. There was nothing to show that the child had been killed, and the police are inclined to believe that the parents were too poor to pay burial expenses and used this method of getting rid of the body.

Exercises by the Edward W. Kingsley Post, G. A. R., will be held at Tremont Temple. At 8.15 the post will hold exercises on the Common, the meeting in the Temple being held directly afterward.

The bronze statute of General Draper will be unveiled at Hopedale, and a bronze tablet in memory of the sons of Harvard who died in the Spanish American war will be shown for the first time at the Harvard Common.

Society will of course be out in large numbers at the Chestnut Hill Horse Show on Monday. Many of Boston's society people will motor out to Point of Pines, where the new auto club of the Lynnway Club will be formally opened.

There will be numerous baseball games. The South Boston Yacht Club will open its season, the golfers will be out in full force on the links, Harvard will row Cornell on the Charles, the Knights of St. Finbar will hold a track meet at the Locust street grounds, there will be bicycle races at the Revere track, the big work horse parade will be held, and the Old Colony and Dorchester driving clubs will show their horses at Weymouth.

In addition there will be Barnum & Bailey's circus.

Charity will be interested in the annual May festival to be held in Mechanics' building in aid of the Home of Destitute Catholic Children. Many fraternities will hold memorial exercises. The Boston lodge of Elks will strew flowers on the graves of their departed brothers, at Mt. Hope cemetery.

A complete orchestra, with vocal and instrumental soloists, have been especially engaged by the Henry Siegel Company for the occasion. Mme. De Le Vie is a charming and brilliant woman. BOSTON FIRM NAMED IN BRIBERY CASE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 28.—An indictment for perjury was returned against State Senator D. W. Holtslaw of Iuka, a Democrat, by the Sangamon County Grand Jury, which is probing the alleged bribery in the Illinois Legislature.

The indictment is based principally on the testimony of Senator Holtslaw that he did not know of, and had never arranged for a meeting of himself with J. W. Knox of Chicago, representing the Derby Desk Company of Boston, lowest, but unsuccessful bidder to supply the House and Senate with furniture.

WELLESLEY SENIORS ARE BEST SINGERS

WELLESLEY, May 28.—Seniors and juniors were winners in the annual singing contest held here at Wellesley College before an audience of 2,000 who gathered about the lawn in front of the chapel. The seniors were adjudged to be the best singers and the juniors carried off the prize for the best original song.

CHARLESTOWN FIRE CAUSES $100,000 LOSS

Fire early to-day destroyed four big wooden buildings of the Export Lumber Company in the freight yards of the Boston & Maine Railroad at Mystic Wharf, Charlestown, with a loss estimated at $100,000.

Three alarms were sounded for the blaze, which threatened to sweep the entire waterfront of Charlestown. The flames spread rapidly from building to building, and before the firemen arrived the entire plant was burning.

The Charlestown Navy Yard and the big grain elevator of the Boston & Maine were threatened by the blaze, and the firemen had a hard fight to confine it to the lumber wharf.

Long tongues of flame shot half way across the creek separating the Mystic docks from Charlestown proper and threatened to destroy the big coal pockets and wharves of the Wellington-Wild Coal Company on the opposite side of the river. Scores of tenement houses along Medford street were also endangered by the flames.

A strong west wind which blew the flames out over the water was all that saved the big freight yards and sheds of the Boston & Maine and the immense coal pockets on the opposite side of Mystic Wharf from destruction.

Two barks tied up at the docks were pulled out into the stream to save them from destruction. Engine 32 and engine 44, the two fireboats, rendered valuable aid in fighting the fire from the water front. The firemen on land were obliged to get water in relays from the street hydrants. Water was also pumped from the creek.

Sixty big piles of valuable lumber were also destroyed. The firemen worked for three hours before the fire was declared under control. The crews of the freight trains tied up in the yards organized themselves into a volunteer fire brigade, and with small lines of hose assisted the firemen in fighting the fire.

The fire started, it is thought, from a spark from one of the shifting engines in the railroad yards.

NEW PIECE SYSTEM FOR ARSENAL WORK

A new system of piecework has been instituted at the Watertown arsenal, by which the 450 workmen employed there are enabled to better their wages and increase the capacity of the plant at the same time. The new plan is to be inspected next week by Major J. H. Rice of the Ordnance Department, Washington, who will report to General Crozier, head of the department. All of the work has been standardized so as to do away with all waste of time and labor.

WHY SALVES FAIL TO CURE ECZEMA

Scientists are now agreed that the eczema germs are lodged not in the outer skin or epidermis, but in the inner skin. Hence, a penetrating liquid is required, not an outward salve that clogs the pores.

We recommend to all eczema patients the standard prescription Oil of Wintergreen as compounded in liquid form known as D. D. D. Prescription. A trial bottle of this D. D. D. Prescription, at only 25 cents, will instantly relieve the itch. We have sold and recommended this remedy for years, and know of wonderful cures from its use. We recommand it to our patrons.

MISS GREENE HARVARD MAN'S BRIDE TO-DAY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

THE all-important event in the social realm to-day—and a fitting one for winding up the week's festivities—was the fashionable wedding at Trinity this noontime of Elizabeth Shaw Greene, who was given in marriage by her elder brother, E. Gerry Greene of Cambridge, to Samuel Eliot Morison of Brimmer street.

The bride looked unusually winsome and attractive as she walked down the aisle wearing ivory satin with rose point lace and tulle veil, with orange blossoms and valley lilies, all of which seemed chosen for brides of her particular type of beauty.

She was attended by her two sisters, Miss Gladis Greene and Miss Valerie Greene, who wore light blue satin under white. Their hats were of white tulle and they carried white lilacs and roses.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity, who was assisted by Bishop McVickar of Rhode Island. The church was beautifully decorated with Killarney roses and greenery.

The bridegroom was attended by one of his Harvard classmates, Augustus P. Loring, Jr., of Cambridge, and the ushers were George B. Morison, S. Parkman Shaw, Jr., and Samuel Vaughan of Boston; James E. Gardner, Jr., and Quincy S. Greene of Cambridge; Hallowell Dales, Jr., and F. H. B. Byrne of New York, and Samuel Eliot of Boston and Manchester.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Batchelder Greene. She is well known here and is a popular member of the Vincent Club. Her mother was an Austen and her grandmother was a sister of the late Quincy A. Shaw.

Mr. Morison is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Morison (Emily Eliot) of Brimmer street, and grandson of the late Mrs. Samuel Eliot. He is a graduate of Harvard of the class of 1908, and of tall, athletic build. He finished his education abroad a year ago last Winter, when the Morisons were spending the Winter in Paris.

Among the wedding guests were representatives of the following prominent Boston families: the Lorings, Charles William Eliots, the S. A. Eliots, the Abbot Lawrence Lowells, the Converses, Crosbys, the Grays, Austens, the Bigelows, Shaws, Vaughans, Gardners and Wendells.

After the ceremony the guests attended a large reception held at the home of the bride and her sisters on Marlboro street. Mr. and Mrs. Morison will have an extended wedding journey in this country after which they will make their home in Boston.

Odd OCCURRENCES

Twins Borns With Teeth.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Chicago physicians are interested in the case of the birth two weeks ago of twins, each one of which had two well developed teeth. The twins are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. Edward F. Hurd. Dr. Charles H. Phifer yesterday said the case was unusual, and that the babies' lives were probably saved by the extraction of the teeth ten days after their birth.

Girl Could Not Close Her Jaws.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Freda Stahl, seventeen, of No. 118 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street, employed in a shirtwaist factory at No. 32 West Twentieth street, opened her mouth wide as she was about to bite into a sandwich at lunch and her jaws became wedged so that she could not close them. A physician set her jaw in place again.

"Fat Blond" Spoils Junket.

ALBANY, May 28.—Just because Senate Clerk "Lafe" Gleason, in a spirit of fun, inserted the words, "fat blond stenographer" in reading a resolution offered in the Senate, half a dozen members of that body won't enjoy a junketing trip this Summer at the expense of the State. The Senate consigned the resolution for prison visits to the scrap heap.

Auto Made Husband Bad.

WINSTED, May 28.—"He promised to be a good boy if I bought him an automobile, Judge. I got him a machine and he went from bad to worse."

This was part of the plea of Mrs. Lena Banker of Watertown, who was granted a divorce from her husband, Kenneth Banker, on grounds of intolerable cruelty and habitual intemperance.

Jury Drinks Up Evidence.

SALT LAKE, May 28.—In its zeal to absorb all the facts in the case, a jury in the District Court nullified its own verdict of guilty. J. M. Doull, a druggist, was on trial for selling liquor without a license. The jury sent for the exhibit, drank it all and the judge dismissed them all.

Woodchuck Halts an Auto.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Eugene G. Warner, a wealthy farmer of Baiting Hollow, L. I., dined with some friends at a Riverhead hotel. Two of the men secured a dead woodchuck and put it in the battery box of Warner's auto. The water soaked the batteries and stopped the car on his way home.

Porter Returns $3,000 and Gems

DANBURY, Ct., May 28.—Three thousand dollars in money and diamonds were found by Thomas Taylor, a negro parlor car porter, on the New Haven railroad, on the Pittsfield express, and returned them. He was well rewarded.

BLAMES PARENTS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL LOSS

What is the matter with our Sunday schools? Ignorance regarding the needs of the child and of the work of the schools; indifference of parents and the older members of the parish; spending two hours in fixing Willie for the dancing school on Saturday, but not sparing ten minutes to get him ready for Sunday school; and "inertia"—laziness (a germ disease)—the old order retained because a change would take time.—The Rev. Augustus P. Recco d of Springfield to the American Unitarian Sunday School Association.

GOOD BUYING OF AMERICAN STOCKS ABROAD

There was good buying of Americans in London to-day and most issues showed advance at the close as compared with the closing price for these issues on the New York board yesterday.

Coppers and both Steel common and preferred were well taken by arbitrage houses for New York accounts.

Railway shares were also heavily bought by New York houses. The slight reaction in Northern Pacific and Atchison were attributed to some offering by the Continent because of the recent reports of decreased net earnings by these roads. Reading was offered by New York for the account of the pool which seems to hope to pick up more stock on Tuesday in New York. Canadian Pacific reacted ⅝ of a point on the announcement that they are floating a $50,000,000 loan in London.

WOMAN TRIED FOR LIFE, JUST LAUGHS

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—Mrs. Dora E. Doxey, on trial on the charge that she killed her alleged husband, William J. Erder, laughed cynically to-day at admissions favorable to her made by witnesses for the State. She requested the bailiff to turn her chair so she would be spared the embarrassment of being stared at by inquisitive persons who fought for admission to the room.

STRAUSSNEIDER HELD IN FARO GANG CASE UNDER $25,000 BAIL

New picture of Mrs. Marguerite Louise Taylor, former fiancee of George Coleman, the Cambridge bank looter.

on he was gradually played until he was landed in the Government's net.

Three central office sleuths nabbed Straussneider on the lawn of his beautiful home while he was looking at the comet. He was attired at the time of his arrest in his trousers, shirt and shoes. The detectives took him into the house to allow him to dress.

The papers in the case had not arrived from Boston when Straussneider was arraigned before Commissioner Morley to-day in Brooklyn, and the information was sworn out by Edward J. Brennan, special agent of the Department of Justice.

Straussneider while awaiting arraignment, said his arrest was a surprise. He was over in Guttenberg, N. J., yesterday arranging to start out with a string of trotting horses he owns for the Summer campaign on the country tracks of New England and Canada.

"If I was mixed up in this thing I wouldn't have stuck around" he remarked.

Prisoner Man of Brains.

Straussneider is a man with brains. He looks upon his calling as a profession and is proud of it. Early in his career he says he learned that it was bad business to "trim" an honest man, but safe business to take money away from a crook.

"I never trimmed a man yet," he told a reporter not long ago, "who didn't think he was helping me rob somebody else. They are always willing to go into a scheme to swindle another party, and sometimes they squeal when they find they have been swindled themselves."

Straussneider was held until Tuesday when the trial of Keliher will be resumed in the Circuit Court before Judge Hale, and a jury. William H. Garland, assistant to Mr. French, called up the District Attorney's office in Brooklyn to-day on the telephone and got Assistant District-Attorney Allen.

High Bail Wanted.

Mr. Allen was told to have Straussneider's bail fixed at $10,000 at the least and as much larger a figure as possible. Mr. Garland said that Straussneider's case would not be taken up until the close of the Keliher trial. It is supposed yesterday that they would finish with Keliher next week, but facts that have just come to light led to the belief to-day that it would take longer.

Coleman was brought to the Post-Office building to-day from the East Cambridge jail and taken to the marshal's office, where he was joined by Lawyer Harvey H. Pratt, of counsel for Keliher. The lawyer and Coleman shook hands when they met. Then Coleman got out his pipe, filled it and lighted up. Mr. Garland strolled in and the three men tackled the books of the Cambridge City Bank, which Coleman manipulated to the extent of nearly $310,000.

Coleman Explains Trick.

Coleman went all over the accounts, pointing out just how he had fooled the bank and the bank examiners, so that it was possible for him to steal the immense sum he took right under their noses. Harvey Pratt wrinkled his brow to get it through his mind and Coleman smiled as though he had done a trick as easy as adding a column of figures.

Coleman was taken into the district attorney's office in the Post Office Building to-day to see if he could identify Charlie Tibbetts, who was suspected by the Government of being Charlie Carter, the faro dealer with whom Coleman dealt in New York during the earlier part of his career as a gambler there. Coleman said he did not know Tibbetts.

Lawyer James Vahey was with Tibbetts when Coleman was brought into the room. The following conversation took place:

May Not Call Tibbetts.

Mr. Garland to Coleman: "Do you know this man?"

Before Coleman could answer Coleman and Tibbetts had shaken hands.

Coleman: "I do not."

Garland: "Did you ever see him before?"

Coleman: "I never did."

Tibbetts: "This is Mr. Coleman?"

Coleman: "Yes."

Vahey to Tibbetts: "Did you ever see this man before?"

Tibbetts: "I never saw him before."

Mr. Vahey said that was all and Coleman went back to his explanation of the books. Tibbetts may not even be called as witness.

Lawyer Pratt finished with Coleman shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Garland said:

"This young fellow, Coleman, is a wizard at figures. I know now how he fooled the bank examiners and the bank. He knew how to juggle figures, but he couldn't manipulate cards. I understand it all now and will be able to make it plain in court."

Coleman was taken back to the East Cambridge prison.

It was said by the Boston police to-day that Straussneider has gone under various aliases, including those of John Strausnieder, "Big Lem" Strausneider, and John W. Smith. The Boston records show that he was arrested in New York on April 7, 1901, and in Buffalo, in January, 1903, as a confidence man. It was said that he was in Boston about three weeks ago.

The prisoner describes himself as a broker, thirty-eight years old. He said that he has two offices in New York and two in Boston and that he conducts his business under his own name. He has been living in Brooklyn for four years. His home at No. 1,600 Dorchester road is valuable. He has been able from some source or other to live very well.

Straussneider is a massively built man, 6 feet 2 inches tall, smooth shaven, and erect in carriage. A part of a finger of his right hand is missing, and the detectives produced a photograph from the police gallery and a Bertillon description that fitted him.

Straussneider lived with his wife and had a number of servants and an automobile. He dressed stylishly and was much respected by residents of the Parkville (Brooklyn) district. His fine presence seemed to bear out the assertions he made concerning his business and his wealth.

'MERRY WIDOW' ELOPES WITH HARVARD MAN

Another "Merry Widow" is married. Must have been some charm about the leading role in that rollicking Viennese opera.

Ethel Jackson, the original "Merry Widow" in the Savage company, got a divorce from one husband to marry another. Then, the other day, the newspapers announced the marriage of Reba Dale, who sang the part in the West, to a New York broker.

Now comes a Boston "Merry Widow" pracing to the altar. She eloped too. Furthermore, she eloped with a really rich young Harvard student, Burney O. Jackson of Brooklyn. And the elopement was carried out under a succession of difficulties that might have disheartened anyone except a "Merry Widow" and a college chap.

She's a Roxbury Girl.

Mrs. Jackson, the bride and formerly the "Merry Widow," was Miss Mildred Peshmalyan, daughter of Baruyr Peshmalyan, an Armenian rug merchant of No. 120 Perham street, Roxbury. She joined Henry W. Savage's "Merry Widow" company at the Tremont Theatre two years ago, taking a small part. She was assigned as understudy to Lina Abarbanell, who had the title role. She had no opportunity for the part in the Boston engagement. But, on the Western tour, when Miss Abarbanell was ill, Miss Peshmalyan was given the role and carried it successfully.

It was during the Boston engagement that she met Burney O. Jackson, now a Harvard junior. Warm friendship developed. When Miss Peshmalyan returned home recently for the Summer Jackson made such ardent love that Miss Peshmalyan consented to marry him. But her parents thought she was too young.

Thwarted by An Auto.

Last Monday the couple started in Jackson's auto to Nashua, N. H. The machine broke down twice and the trip was abandoned for that day. They returned home. The next day they slipped away again and this time went by train to Nashua where they were married by City Clerk Cyr. Returning home they obtained forgiveness.

As soon as the college year is ended Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will go abroad, returning here for Mr. Jackson to complete his Harvard studies.

CHILD KILLED BY SKYLIGHT FALL

While sliding down a skylight over the roof of No. 31 London street, East Boston, five-year-old Annie Bowles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Bowles, crashed through the skylight and fell to the ground, three stories below. She sustained fatal internal injuries and died at the East Boston Relief Station, whither she was taken in an ambulance. Her sister, Loretta, was hanging out clothes to dry, and Annie was permitted to play about on the roof.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Strawberries are becoming more and more plentiful and the price is falling day by day. Yesterday excellent berries sold in the markets for 10 cents a box and street men were selling very good ones at three boxes for 25 cents.

Asparagus is also becoming more plentiful and cheaper. Good bunches sell for from 15 cents to 25 cents, and fancy New Jersey and Pennsylvania asparagus, which was sold for 50 cents to 75 cents a bunch a short time ago, is selling for 35 cents and 40 cents.

There is still a great scarcity of mackerel. During the first of the week there was a large supply, but it has fallen off again and large fish are still selling for 40 cents each.

Bluefish are quite plentiful and sell for 20 cents a pound. Dealers say that they are receiving some of the finest bluefish now that they have seen in recent years.

There are plenty of large roe shad in the market and they are selling for 15 cents a pound.

Salmon is plentiful and sells for 30 cents a pound.

Potatoes have taken a jump in price. New potatoes still hover around 50 cents and 60 cents a peck and old potatoes have gone up about 10 cents a bushel during the past week.

Butter is coming into the Boston market by the hundred thousand pounds, but the price does not break. The cold storage houses were so nearly depleted when the Spring shipments began that the dealers prefer to store butter to breaking the price, confident that they can dispose of it later at a better profit.

THOUSANDS CHEER JEFF AS FIGHTER BOXES AT EXHIBITION IN 'FRISCO

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28.—If Jim Jeffries needed any proof that he is regarded as the hope of the white race, it was furnished him the instant he placed his foot into the ring at Dreamland. The crowd stood up and shrieked in a throat-cracking way, and when the tumult partly subsided a man behind the press seats remarked:

"I haven't heard such a tumult as that since the night Al Neil knocked out Kyle Whitney, the negro fighter."

It was at the conclusion of a series of for round bouts that Jeff came towards the ring, accompanied by Sam Berger, Joe Choynski and a few others from Rowardennan. The cheering began while Jeff was gently forcing his way along the crowded aisles and when he hopped upon the platform the uproar became intense.

The big fellow, who wore the regulation boxing trunks and was bare-legged and bare-bodied, bowed his acknowledgments. The welcome accorded Jeffries merged into one equally enthusiastic when Jim Corbett, dressed in a gray suit, stepped into the ring.

Corbett Greets Choynski.

Jim walked straight over to his old time rival, Joe Choynski and threw his arm across Choynski's shoulders. The pair laughed in each other's face and swayed around in a mock clinch and the crowd cheered harder than ever. From the way Jim and Joe beamed on each other there is little danger of the old sores of the barge days being reopened when Corbett becomes an inmate of Camp Jeffries down in the mountains.

Billy Jordan, the announcer, first introduced Corbett as a native son, the California wonder; the cleverest man who ever stepped into a ring and the ex-champion of the world."

"Now," said Jordan, "I introduce the great and only undefeated champion of the world, James J. Jeffries."

It cannot be said that they yelled any harder for Jeff than they did for those who preceded him. As a matter of fact, they could not do so. The big fellow's skin was tanned and his appearance showed that he had been hard at work. As he stepped around and tested the floor the play of muscles and sinews of his legs was not noticeable.

As to the boxing, while Jeff stepped very lively and kept Choynski busy, it was quite plain that he was withholding his gloves when he might have landed punches. There was a bit of flutter in the crowd when he playfully rushed Cohynski to the ropes and then refrained from striking him.

Choynski hit out freely, although lightly, with both hands, but in the first round of the bout Jeff did not make a single attempt with the right. He used his left in the stiff armed swinging manner of the old days and frequently employed a double punch, first on the ribs and then on the side of the face.

Jeff was remarkably quick on his feet and whenever he made a sudden leap to close quarters there was a yell of satisfaction from his watchers.

In the second round Jeff still continued to use the high left which did much execution for him in his early fights. After about a minute of sparring he brought the right into play and dealt two smart little raps on the jaw. These punches were delivered with good precision. Joe continued to the big fellow's face with lefts and rights, when suddenly Jeff ducked under a left and shouldered into close quarters. He was thoroughly warmed up and his display of speed was the object of remark.

Gets Down To Action.

In the third round Jim quickened still more. He got under Choynski's leads and sent his left against his stomach. At one time he held his face towards Choynski, and after Joe had tapped him a few times he made a sudden dart toward Joe and scored with a double left.

Jack Jeffries then went three rounds with his big brother, and the work was much of the same order as that in which Choynski figured. Jim more than once jumping close, withheld his fire, seemingly quite content to reach a position where heavy body slugging might have been indulged in had he so wished. Once or twice Jack Jeffries tried a lively-looking right swing to his brother's chin and Jim snapped his head out of range in a way that showed he still retains his ideas of distance.

It was very evident through all the boxing that Jeff did not exert a tithe of his bodily strength. The gentle way in which he pushed brother Jack away with his shoulder while breaking clinches suggests that big Jim has a world of power in his mighty frame. Sam Berger acted as referee in both bouts.

JIM CORBETT TO MAP OUT TRAINING STUNTS FOR JEFF

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28.—With the arrival of Jim Corbett it is said that a council of all the parties having to do with the training of Jeffries will be held at the Rowardennan camp and that some changes in the big fellow's system of preparation will be suggested. Of course, with a man of Jeffries's temperament, all the cabals in the world would be ineffective unless the principal thought well of the scheme proposed, but in this particular instance it is understood that Jim is in full accord with his advisers.

There will be no mystery about the conference the idea simply being to impress upon Jeff the necessity of devoting the major part of the time at his disposal to exercise calculated to increase his speed. Jeff, in fact, has met his camp fellows half way. He has said that what he wants from this time is plenty of boxing and a good deal of sprinting. As these are the things Berger, Corbett and Choynski are in favor of, there is no fear of dissension arising when the committee of advice waits upon Jeff.

Out at Johnson's camp, a general invitation is extended to would-be sparring partners. During the next few days Johnson expects to try out quite a batch of heavyweight novices, and if any of them live up to the test applied they will be added to the negro's sparring staff. Jack believes that he cannot have too many men to box with, and if he has his way he will gather a round dozen of trial horses before another week passes.

Explains Boost in Prices.

According to telegrams received at the headquarters of Rickard and Gleason, misunderstandings have arisen in the East in regard to prices of tickets that are at the disposal of Eastern visitors. One dispatch makes it appear that the sports of some of the big cities will be unable to obtain any of the cheaper priced tickets and will be forced to purchase the $50 seats. Jack Gleason said to-day:

"This is all a mistake. I will freely admit that in reply to some of the inquiries from Eastern cities I have advised the purchase of $20 seats in preference to $10 seats, as the former mean positions nearer the ring, and consequently a better view of the contest. As to the $10 seats, we have had applications for big blocks of them, and the course we pursue is always the same.

"We want the parties ordering $10 seats to send cash for the same and I'll explain why. If we were to reserve $10 seats on a simple request to do so, the whole of the $10 space would go like hot cakes and our plans would make it look as though all the tens had been sold. Then when it came to making good on the reservations some of the parties who applied might send word that on account of withdrawals they were compelled to make cancellations.

"This might leave us at a late hour with what I might call 'unredeemed spaces.' That is why we want to make a cash transaction of every sale of $10 seats. There will then be no danger of telling people 'they are all gone' only to find later that batches of them have been thrown back on our hands."

JEFF RUNS 4 MILES IN 25 MINUTES AND BREAKS OWN RECORD

JEFFRIES'S TRAINING CAMP, Rowardennan, Cal., May 28.—Jim Jeffries put in a big day of regular training work. With a week of half rest behind him, the big fellow was happy and snappy in his work.

Jeff started the day by bursting his own and all other records for the run between Boulder Creek and Ben Lomond. He went up with Joe Choynski and Farmer Burns in the usual way, walking a distance and sprinting a distance. After the party had passed the turning post Jeff started out smartly for the four-mile run. Not a stop was made. It was the longest run he has yet made. Watches were held for the time, and when Jeff pulled puffing and stewing into Rowardennan he had covered the four miles in twenty-five minutes. Choynski and Burns, who are far from poor runners, came in far behind Jeffries.

Jeff went to his gymnasium and for more than an hour worked at a fast pace. The punching bag was vigorously pummelled for half an hour with hardly a break. Then he skipped the rope, making 103 skips in eleven minutes. The rope-skipping was followed by work at the weights, shadow boxing and a special abdominal exercise over the seat of a backless chair.

COURT REFUSES TO VACATE ATTACHMENT ON JACK'S FORFEIT

NEW YORK, May 28.—The application of "Tex" Rickard, one of the promoters and referee in the coming fight between Jack Johnson and Jim Jeffries, to vacate and set aside a judgment for $2,200 obtained against him by Dr. Cornelius G. Coakley, throat specialist, for services rendered Rickard's child when suffering from tonsilitis in 1906, was denied by Justice Whitney in the Supreme Court.

Dr. Coakley obtained an attachment against $20,000 of the forfeit money for the Jeffries-Johnson fight, and State Senator "Big Tim" Sullivan of this city set aside $2,200 pending settlement of the suit.

Rickard's attorneys afterward succeeded in having the attachment vacated, but the appellate division reversed this decision, and the attachment now stands.

MACK'S PLAN TO INCREASE THE HITTING

Connie Mack would like to see a little more hitting, and he thinks the best way to bring it about would be to give the batsmen four chances to hit the ball in place of three.

Four and four, Connie holds, would be more effective in placing the batsman on on equal footing with the pitcher than any other change that would safely be made unless it be to abandon the rule which calls a strike on a batsman for fouling a ball. To make both these changes would surely result in more hitting and fewer shut-outs.

The foul-strike rule was adopted for the purpose of stopping the practice of fouling off good balls for the purpose of getting first on called balls.

Now the umpire calls a strike for the firts two fouls, even though they be made on hard swings at the ball with the unmistakable intent of hitting it. This rule not only handicaps the batsman in his chances of hitting safely, but it is likewise a handicap to "inside ball," particularly the hit-and-run game. A batsman is inclined to feel timid about throwing away chances to hit when he knows that a strike will be called on him every time he touches the ball with his bat.

As a manager Mack thinks the pitching problem hard enough to solve as it is, but as an owner he recognizes that more hitting is desirable.

A return to the high and low ball rule of the past, he thinks, would give the batsman too much advantage, and kill the effectiveness of some pitchers. He thinks other methods to increase hitting should be tried before resorting to the high and low ball plan.

Four strikes and four balls he considers the safest and best proposition, notwithstanding the fact that it means a change in a rule that is as old as baseball.

Before and After the Game

By DYKE CLARK.

It was due to the kindness of that steeple-like pitcher, Falkenberg, who Jim McGuire unwraps once in a while, that the Speed Boys were able to stave off a defeat in the final game with the Naps. The game ended when the teams were starting the tenth inning, and the score was 1 to 1, as the Naps had to catch a train. It was the slipup by Falkenberg in forcing in the lone tally the Speed Boys got in the opening inning when he passed a couple of batters with two already on the bases.

The Speed Boys should have won by a comfortable score, as they had chances enough to get runs across, but somehow the bingles were not coming at the right time when the sacks were populated and the Naps, by a little bumping and Arellanes getting a bit shaky, were able to make the tieing run when the time limit was nearly up.

It was a tough game to lose for Jim McGuire, who takes his team back to Cleveland with but a single victory out of the Eastern trip. The Forest City fans have been hollering in a loud key over the constant defeats and lay the reverses at the door of the veteran manager, who is striving might and main to sidetrack the streak of hard luck following his pets. The Naps will always be a big attraction as long as Lajoie is in the lineup, no matter where they stand in the race and he is worth every cent of the big salary he pulls down.

It was quite a surprise to see Arellanes in the box. The Mexican has had a long rest and has evidently kept in good form for the article of pitching he showed against the Naps was first class, as he fanned three, including King Lajoie, and allowed only four safeties.

At last those Quakers are here and the Speed Boys will have the chance to show the home fans what they can do against a team that has the class to lead the league. The top Western clubs have proved such soft victims for Donovan's men that the supporters have waited patiently for the Athletics to put in an appearance, as there is some good drubbing to be handed to them for past bad turns they gave the Speed Boys at the start of the season. It was largely the five wins over the Speed Boys that gave the Athletics their boost up to the top, which they have been able to hold for some time, but they are not so far out of sight that they can't be reached, and it's the business of the local team to pull them off the perch in the five games to be played here before the meeting winds up.

Tris Speaker corralled the fielding feature when he took Bemis' line drive off the grass tops. Tris made a flying dive tackle at the ball and got it in his mitt while he was flat to the earth. Arellanes knocked down a hard rap in the same inning that had lots of steam behind it.

When the score board announced that the Doves were leading the Pirates there was a splash of applause, which was merited, as Lake's men deserve a lot of credit for breaking even in the series with such a toppy team as the world's champions.

HARRY NILES SOLD BY TAYLOR TO NAPS

Harry Niles, the fleet-footed Red Sox outfielder, who was purchased several years ago by John I. Taylor from New York, has been sold to Cleveland.

Niles will join the Naps Monday. Deacon McGuire felt in need of an extra fielder, and as Boston has secured Engle and was not particularly in need of two utility men, the deal was pushed through.

JOHNSON TELLS HOW HE LAYS OVER JEFF AND WILL WIN BIG FIGHT

By ED W. SMITH.

Sporting Editor Chicago American and Noted Western Authority.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 27.—Jack Johnson has it figured out to his own satisfaction that he is going to whip James J. Jeffries because he is the best man Jeff ever met and certainly has nothing to fear now that Jeff has had a layoff of five years. It is about Jeffries' size that most of Johnson's figuring revolves. This is the way he put it up to me:

"Here is a man who was champion by sheer force. He did not have much else to recommend him. He was lucky to live in an age of rather indifferent heavyweights, as far as size and weight are concerned. He bumped his way through the lot; in no particular case was victory impressive.

Jeff Licked Old Men.

"He boxes a lot of little men and old men and men whose ring usefulness had long since departed.

"All right, smile if you will, but let us go through the list as we find it in Jeffries's record. And I will review only the supposedly good men that he tackled, leaving the culls without comment. They are not worth it.

"Take Joe Choynski first of all. Joe almost got a draw with him in twenty rounds when he was a mere middleweight. Jeff simply scratched out a victory there. We will grant you that Joe was at his best at the time and that perhaps Jeff was coming along. All right. Put it that way then.

"The next on the list was Peter Jackson, a poor old man, broken in spirit and health, a mere shadow. It was a shame to even think of matching him with a young man like Jeffries. Peter could scarcely hold his hands in position and of course fell an easy victim. No particular credit in that.

Sharkey Too Small.

"Then we find Tom Sharkey, the sailor lad and one of the toughest and gamest of his day. They boxed twice, one a twenty-round battle in San Francisco, and again a twenty-five-round battle in New York. Jeffries, despite the tremendous advantage he had in weight and strength, failed to get Tom off his feet, and, indeed, did not win either contest by much of a margin.

"Sharkey was all too small for a man of Jeff's size, too short and small in every way. But he gave the big fellow the toughest arguments one could imagine.

"Next we find Bob Fitzsimmons, a wonderful fighter, greatest of all, probably, size considered. What was that size? He was merely a middleweight and surely could do 160 pounds at any time if he had to.

"Jeffries beat him twice, but had to rely upon size in both cases to do it. Fitzsimmons gave him awful bumpings both times before he was crushed down by sheer force.

Corbett Had Only Skill.

"Then take Corbett. He lacked everything but skill and speed to make him a great man in the ring. He went twenty-three rounds with Jeff and might have won had he been more careful. Corbett lacked the punch as well as the weight and strength. Munroe was nothing at all, and there you are.

"Now take my case. I have got everything that any of Jeffries old opponents lacked. First of all and best perhaps, I have the size and weight. I am as big as he is and for the first time in his life he will box a man who is a match for him in that respect.

"Sharkey, Fitz and Corbett lacked this and I have got it. It is not for the purpose of blowing my horn that I say I am clever as any of them, Corbett included. I can hit a hard punch, just as hard as Fitzsimmons ever could, backed as it is by 210 pounds of good solid meat. As far as courage is concerned who can say that I have not shown it all along?

Has Jeff Always Been Game?

"Has Jeff always shown it? Didn't he want to stop in the New York fight with Sharkey? Didn't he want to stop with Fitzsimmons in San Francisco? But I am not scoffing at him.

"I'll grant that he was a great man in the ring, but always a lucky one to live in an age of smaller men each of whom lacked something. All of these advantages I have got. Why shouldn't I win?"

KETCHEL LICKS LEWIS QUICKLY

NEW YORK, May 28.—Stanley Ketchel of Michigan, the middleweight champion, knocked out Willie Lewis of this city in the second round of their scheduled ten-round bout at the National Sporting Club. Lewis, who was the Parisian idol some months ago, is a welterweight and fully ten pounds lighter than Ketchel, who weighed in at 158 pounds, according to agreement. Tom O'Rourke, the manager of the club, acted as referee. The crowd numbered about 3,000.

Lewis went right at his man in the opening round without showing any sign of fear. They exchanged body blows at close quarters, with Ketchel having the better of the exchange. Lewis stepped cleverly inside of a vicious right swing and planted a straight left on Stanley's face a moment later. After another session of in-fighting Ketchel sent a left to the face, and the gong ended the round.

Lewis was very confident when he stepped to the centre of the ring in the second round. He went after Ketchel furiously, but the fast pace suited Ketchel, who, after a few exchanges, planted a hard left on Lewis's body and followed it with a terrific right swing to the jaw. Lewis fell hard to the floor and was counted out. He lay there for several minutes before he revived sufficiently to be helped out of the ring.

GOODMAN-SHEA BOUT AT BROCKTON DRAW

BROCKTON, May 28.—Kid Goodman and Kid Shea of Boston boxed six fast rounds to a draw before the Young Men's Social and Athletic Club here. The decision was well received by the large crowd.

Tony Lorenzo of Boston won over Young Murphy of Boston in the fourth of their scheduled six-round go, and Young Neafsey of Brockton put Samuelson of Brockton away in three rounds.

"BEST CATCH I EVER MADE," SAYS TY COBB

"I guess the best catch I ever made on a ball field," says Ty Cobb, "was the result of playing close. The count was 2-1 in our favor. It was the last half of the ninth, in Washington. The home team was at the bat. Two Senators were on second and third and a single would have put the game on ice. Lelivelt hit the torpedo square on the seam and polled it over Jimmy Delehanty's head. I was laying for a short hit, figuring that the game was gone, anyway, if he cracked one to the fence. I was lucky and guessed right. It was a hard catch. I had to race in fast and took the ball at my shoe tops, but I got it and saved the game.

"Another bird of a catch came my way at the expense of Clyde Engle, the big left fielder of the New York Highlanders. Clyde is some hitter—in fact, he can pound the oval about as far as any man in the game. This day the Highlanders had the pillows filled and Clyde was there to pickle it right. He nailed one of George Mullin's fast outshoots on the end of his willow and drove it to deep right center. That was one time I played a deep field. Two Highlanders were gone, and I knew that Clyde would simply kill the leather if he could. So out I went as soon as I heard the crack of Engle's bat. I had to run crossways to get the ball. It really was a very difficult catch. Luck was with me and I speared the ball with my gloved mitt. A thousand-to-one shot, but I put it over, and the doings for the day were over.

"Tommy Leach made a catch at my expense during the world's championship series last Fall that was the most brilliant piece of outfielding that ever came under my observation on the ball field. There was a big overflow crowd on the field and two Detroit runners on the bases. We needed the runs, and there is no telling how that series would have ended if that ball had ever gotten away from Leach. Adams laid the first one over for me, and I met it right. Unfortunately for our side the ball was too high in the air. Leach ran to the crowd and had to break in among the people to make the catch. He got it with one hand. It was a great play and made at the right time."

CAPTAIN OUT OF CREW.

Captain Charles Coe of the Rindge crew is out for the rest of the season because of a faculty edict. Wallis Swart of the second crew has been put in Coe's position at bow in the first.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

THE WAY STANLEY KETCHEL PUT it over Willie Lewis at Tom O'Rourke's sporting emporium in New York last night leaves but little doubt that the idol of the Parisian sporting contingent, which shouts "Vive la Wil-ee" whenever Lewis takes his afternoon stroll along the boulevards, is in the "D and O" class. Billy Papke didn't do a thing to Willie, but it was nothing compared to the beating Stanley handed to him. America evidently doesn't suit Willie.

WHERE IS THE BASEBALL FAN that is not going to see at least one of the five games in the present series between the Red Sox and Athletics? It looks as if the Huntington avenue grounds will be the rendezvous for about all the rooters in this section during the next several days.

MONDAY IS GOING TO BE SOME DAY for the sport fans. With the Red Sox tackling the Athletics at the Huntington avenue grounds, the bike artists doing their grind around the Revere oval, the Cornell and Harvard crews racing for honor and fame on the Charles and hundreds of amateur and semi-professional nines fighting it out it looks on the surface as if old Decoration Day would be a hummer. Here's hoping that it is a great day. Old Sol should be there with bells on.

WHEN GEORGE FAIR AND SOME other of the live Natick lovers of clean sport took hold of Sunnyside Park, it was in a mighty dilapidated condition, but they thoroughly renovated the plant, making it the leading amusement resort of that section. The opening this season comes Monday, when the A. O. H., united with the park association, have a big field day. Fair is a sure enough hustler and has secured some of the fastest horses around Boston for the races, while the athletic events contain the names of the best in the State. It sure will be a great treat for the residents of Natick and vicinity.

IF JACK TWIN SULLIVAN DOESN'T stop in soon we will have to get a special mail box for him. John Mooney might take notice, too. Missive here also for Hector McInnis.

BENEYO WINS IN MOTOR BOAT RACE TO CUBA

HAVANA, May 28.—With the Ilys and the Caroline unsighted when their time allowance expired to-day, and the scratch boat, Loantaka, out of the race, the 1,200-mile Philadelphia-Havana motor boat race to-day was awarded to the Berneyo, owned by S. W. Granbery of Brooklyn. The Berneyo beat the Caliph. The first prize is $1,000 in cash and the $1,000 Philadelphia cup.

The Caliph was the first boat to reach Havana and whizzed across the finish line between Morro Castle lighthouse and a buoy across the mouth of the harbor one minute before the Berneyo.

While the Coliph led the Beneyo, the race was to her advantage, by reason of handicap, of the Beneyo by 3 hours, 22 minutes, 13 second. The Coliph had a time allowance of 7 hours, 1 2minutes, 10 seconds, and the Beneyo, one of 11 hours, 35 minutes, 7 seconds.

The Caroline has not been sighted, and being so long overdue, it is feared she has been lost at sea.

PRINCIPAL FORCES TEAM TO DISBAND

The West Roxbury High school baseball team has been disbanded by Headmaster George C. Mann of the school, because of the alleged bad conduct of the members of the nine on a recent trip.

It is alleged that the boys, after they had played a game with Concord school at Concord about two weeks ago were guilty of acts that were unbecoming representatives of the school.

POOR DENTIST DAN

By G. R. Carpenter.

Sharp edges on Jim Jeffries's teeth cut his checks when boxing. Before his exhibition in San Francisco Friday he will visit Dr. Daniel Deming, dentist.—News Item.

Long a ago a man named Daniel bunked out in a lion's den.
Daniel Boone beat Lo the Indian—made him take the count of ten.
Daniel Webster was more fearless than our old friend Fresno Dan.
Yes, the name of Dan spells courage; ain't it so, historian?
But of all the daring Daniels from Beersheba unto Dan,
Dentist Dr. Daniel Deming looms up now colossean.

For to-day this dentist Daniel has a little date to fill,
It may close by Dr. Daniel diving o'er the window sill.
Then again there is the transom, he may soar out by that route,
Painless to the dentist? Very—if he has a parachute.
Though the doughty "Doc." is dauntless, friends have bought a funeral wreath,
For to-day old Doctor Daniel starts to fix Jim Jeffries' teeth.

They have said that Texas Rickard in the ring third man will be,
His the glory, his the honor, his the water they agree.
But when all the gab is sifted, when we get right down to pan,
If "Doc" lives our vote for third man goes to daring Dentist Dan.

HARVARD AND CORNELL CREWS PRACTICE TO-DAY

The Harvard and Cornell varsity and freshman crews, which are to race on the Charles Decoration Day, were out to-day for practice spins. A big crowd watched the crews as they rowed up stream in easy stretches.

Experts, who followed the crews to-day, were of the opinion that both the varsity and the freshmen eights are evenly matched, and that it is extremely difficult to pick the probable winners.

"Old Man" Courtney watched the Ithacans from the deck of the John Harvard. He coached the crews, but prevented any attempts at speed.

"It is a good Cornell crew," he said, referring to the varsity eight. "I had planned to remain at home for the race with the second varsity of the University of Pennsylvania, which takes place the same day, but after reading about the remarkable trials of Harvard I decided that I could not afford to miss seeing such a fast crew. I have never seen a crew capable of making the time they are credited with and that's why I came down. I want to see how they do it.

"I have two average Cornell crews for this race and while my stroke is an experiment I have no excuses to make either now or after the race. My men will row hard races and will do all they are capable of, no matter what the conditions may be. The days of beating a crew a city block are gone by and to win by a length or even a fraction of a length is honor enough when such crews as Cornell and Harvard meet.

"My plans are to send the crews out again this afternoon. We will rest on Sunday and take an auto trip along the coast. Monday we will limber up in the morning and be ready for the race in the afternoon."

It was also decided to have Banks of Columbia, who was referee of the race here two years ago, serve again, and that the varsity and freshman races shall be started over again in the event of an accident in either boat, such as the breaking if an oar or rowlock, in the first thirty seconds.

CHAPTER I.

From Him That Hath Not.

RECEIVER at ear, Spaulding of Messrs. Atwater & Spaulding, importers of motoring garments and accessories, listened to the switchboard operator's announcement with grave attention, acknowledging it with a toneless: "All right. Send him in." Then hooking up the desk telephone he swung around in his chair to face the door of his private office, and in a brief ensuing interval painstakingly ironed out of his face and attitude every indication of the frame of mind in which he awaited his caller.

It was, as a matter of fact, anything but a pleasant one; he had a distasteful duty to perform, but that was the last thing he designed to become evident. Like most good business men he nursed a pet superstition or two, and of the number of these the first was that he must in all his dealings present an inscrutable front, like a poker player's; captains of industry were uniformly like that, Spaulding understood; if they entertained emotions it was strictly in private.

Accordingly, he armored himself with a magnificent imperturbability which at times almost deceived its wearer.

Occasionally it deceived others; notably now it bewildered Duncan as he entered on the echo of Spaulding's "Come!" He had apprehended the visage of a thunder storm, with a rattle of brusque complaints. He encountered Spaulding as he had always seemed—a little blanker for glasses, whose lenses seemed always to catch the light and, glaring, mask the eyes behind them; a prosperous man of affairs, well groomed both as to body and as to mind; a machine for the transaction of business, with all a machine's vivacity and temperamental responsiveness.

A Human Business Machine.

It was just that quality in him that Duncan envied, who was vaguely impressed that, if he himself could only imitate, however minutely, the phlegm of a machine, he might learn to ape something of its efficiency and so, ultimately, prove himself of some worth to the world—and incidentally, to Nathaniel Duncan.

Thus far his spasmodic attempts to adapt to the requirements and limitations of the world of business his own equipment of misfit inclinations and ill-assorted abilities had unanimously turned out signal failures. So he envied Spaulding without particularly admiring him.

Now the sight of his employer, professionally bland and capable, and with no animus to be discerned in his attitude, provided Duncan with one brief, evanescent flash of hope, one last expiring instant of dignity (tempered by his unquenchable humor) in which to face his fate. Something of the hang-dog vanished from his habit and for a little time he carried himself again with all his onetime grace and confidence.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Spaulding," he said, replying to a nod as he dropped into the chair that nod had indicated. A faint smile lightened his expression and made it quite engaging.

"G'dafternoon." Spaulding surveyed him swiftly, then laced his fat little fingers and contemplated them with detached intentness. "Just get in, Duncan?"

"On the 3:30 from Chicago." * * *

There was a pause, during which Spaulding reviewed his fingernails with impartial interest; in that pause Duncan's poor little hope died a natural death. "I got your wire," he resumed; "I mean it, it got me—overtook me at Minneapolis * * * So here I am."

"You haven't wasted time."

"I fancied the matter might be urgent, sir."

Spaulding lifted his brows ever so slightly. "Why?"

"Well, I gathered from the fact that you wired me to come home that you wanted my advice."

"Your Advice?" He Asked.

A second time Spaulding gestured with his eyebrows, for once fairly surprised out of his pose. "Your advice!" * * * *

"Yes," said Duncan evenly, "as to whether you ought to give up your customers on my route or send them a man who could sell goods."

"Well," * * * Spaulding admitted.

"Oh, don't think I'm boasting of my acuteness: anybody could have guessed as much from the great number of heavy orders I have not been sending you."

"You've had bad luck * * *"

"You mean you have, Mr. Spaulding. It was good luck for me to be drawing down my weekly checks, bad luck to you not to have a man who could earn them."

His desperate honesty touched Spaulding a trifle; at the risk of not seeming a business man to himself he inclined dubiously to relent, to give Duncan another chance.

The fellow was likable enough, his employer considered; he had good humor and, even in dejection, distinction; whatever he was not, he was a man of birth and breeding. His face might be rusty with a day-old stubble, as it was; his shirt cuffs frayed his shoes down at the heel, his baggy clothing weirdly ready-made, as they were; there remained his air. You'd think he might amount to something, to somewhat more than a mere something, given half a chance in the right direction. Then what? * * * Spaulding sought from Duncan elucidation of this riddle.

"Duncan," he said, "what's the trouble?"

"I thought you knew that; I thought that was why you called me in with my route half covered."

"You mean?"——

"I mean I can't sell your line."

"Why?"

"God only knows. I want to, badly enough. It's just general incompetence, I presume."

"What makes you think that?"

Duncan smiled bitterly. "Experience," he said.

"You've tried—what else?"

"A little of everything—all the jobs open to a man with a knowledge of Latin and Greek and the higher mathematics; shipping clerk, time keeper, cashier—all of 'em."

"And yet Kellogg believes in you."

Duncan nodded dolefully. "Harry's a good friend. We roomed together at college. That's why he stands for me."

"He says you only need the right opening"——

"And nobody knows where that is except my unfortunate employers; it's the back door going out for mine every time. * * * Oh, Harry's been a prince to me. He's found me four or five jobs with friends of his—like yourself. But I don't seem to last.

"You see I was brought up to be ornamental and irregular rather than useful; to blow about in motor cars and keep a valet busy sixteen hours a day—and all that sort of thing. My father's failure—you know about that?"

Spaulding nodded. Duncan went on gloomily, talking a great deal more freely than he would at any other time—suffering, in fact, from that species of auto hypnosis induced by the sound of his own voice recounting his misfortunes, which seems especially to affect a man down on his luck.

He Recalls the Failure.

"That smash came when I was five years out of college—I'd never thought of turning my hand to anything in all that time. I'd always had more coin than I could spend—never had to consider the worth of money or how hard it is to earn. My father saw to all that. He seemed not to want me to work; not that I hold that against him; he'd an idea I'd turn out a genius of some sort or other, I believe. * * * Well, he failed and died all in a week, and I found myself left with an extensive wardrobe, expensive tastes, an impractical education—and not so much of that that you'd notice it—and not a cent. * * * I was too proud to look to my friends for help in those days—and perhaps that was as well; I sought jobs on my own. * * * Did you ever keep books in a fish market?"

"No." Spaulding's eyes twinkled behind his large, shiny glasses.

"But what's the use of my boring you?" Duncan made as if to rise, suddenly remembering himself.

"I don't mean to; mostly, I presume, I've been blundering round an explanation of Kellogg's kindness to me, in my usual ineffectual way—felt somehow an explanation was due you, as the latest to suffer through his misplaced interest in me."

"Perhaps," said Spaulding, "I am beginning to understand. Go on; I'm interested. About the fish market?"

"Oh, I just happened to think of it as a sample experience—and the last of that particular brand. I got nine dollars a week and earned every cent of it inhaling the atmosphere. My board cost me six and the other three afforded me a chance to demonstrate myself a captain of finance—paying laundry bills and clothing myself, besides buying lunches and such-like small matters.

"I did the whole thing, you know. The hours were easy, too: didn't have to get to work until 5 in the morning. * * * I lasted five weeks at that job before I was taken sick; shows what a great constitution I've got."

He laughed uncertainly and paused, thoughtful, his eyes vacant, fixed upon the retrospect that was a grim prospect of the imminent future.

"And then?"——

"Oh?"—— Duncan roused. "Why, then I fell in with Kellogg again; he found me trying the open-air cure on a bench in Washington Square. Since then he's been finding me one berth after another. He's a sure-enough optimist."

Spaulding shifted uneasily in his chair, stirred by an impulse whose unwisdom he could not doubt. Duncan had assuredly done his case no good by painting his shortcomings in colors so vivid; yet, somehow strangely, Spaulding liked him the better for his open-hearted confession.

"Well," * * * Spaulding stumbled awkwardly.

"Yes; of course," said Duncan promptly, rising. "Sorry if I tired you."

"What do you mean by 'Yes, of course?'"

"That you called me in to fire me—and so that's over with. Only I'd be sorry to have you sore on Kellogg for saddling me on you. You see, he believed I'd make good, and so did I; in a way, at least, I hoped so."

"Oh, that's all right," said Spaulding uncomfortably. "The trouble is, you see, we're nothing else open just now. But if you'd really like another chance on the road, I—I'll be glad to speak to Mr. Atwater about it."

"Don't you do it!" Duncan counselled him sharply, aghast. "He might say yes. And I simply couldn't accept; it wouldn't be charity—for I've proved I can't earn my wages; and I haven't come to that yet. No!" he concluded, with determination, and picked up his hat.

"Just a minute." Spaulding held him with a gesture. "You're forgetting something; at least I am. There's a month's pay coming to you; the cashier will hand you the check as you go out."

Kellogg Was His Angel.

"A month's pay?" Duncan said blankly. "How's that? I've drawn up to the end of this week already, if you don't know it."

"Of course, I knew it. But we never let our men go without a month's notice or its equivalent, and"——

"No." Duncan interrupted firmly. "No; but thank you just the same. I couldn't. I really couldn't. It's good of you, but * * * Now,' he broke off abruptly. "I've left my accounts—what there is of them—with the bookkeeping department, and the checks for my sample trunks. There'll be a few dollars coming to me on my expense account, and I'll send you my address as soon as I get one."

"But look here"—Spaulding got to his feet frowning.

"No," reiterated Duncan positively. "There's no use. I'm grateful to you for your toleration of me—and all that. But we can't do anything better now than call it all off. Good-by, Mr. Spaulding."

Spaulding nodded, accepting defeat with the better grace because of an inate conviction that it was just as well after all. And, furthermore, he admired Duncan's stand. So he offered his hand—an unusual condescension. "You'll make good somewhere yet," he asserted.

"I wish I could believe it." Duncan's grasp was firm, since he felt more assured of some humanity latent in his late employer. "However * * * Goodby."

"Good luck to you," rang in his ears as the door put a period to the interview.

He stopped and took up the battered suit case and rusty overcoat which he had left outside the junior partner's office, then, went on, shaking his head. "Much obliged," he said huskily to himself. "But what's the good of that? There's no room anywhere for a professional failure.' And that's what I am; just a ne'er-do-well. I never realized what that meant, really, before, and it's certainly taken me a long time to find out. But I know now, all right. * * *"

Outside on the steps of the building, he paused a moment, fascinated by the brisk spectacle afforded by lower Broadway at the hour when the cave-like offices in its cliff-like walls begin to empty themselves, when the overlords and their lieutenants close their desks and turn faces homeward, leaving the details of the day's routine to be wound up by underlings.

In the clear light of the late Spring afternoon a stream of humanity was high and fluent upon the sidewalks. Duncan had glimpses of keen-faced men, bright-faced women, eager boys, quickened all by that manner of efficiency and intelligence which seems so integrally American.

A well-dressed throng, well-fed, amiable and animated, looking ever forward, the resistless tide of affairs that gave it being bore it onward; it passed the onlooker as a strong current passes flotsam into a back eddy, with no pause, no turning aside. Acutely he felt his aloofness from it, who had no part in its interests and scarcely any comprehension of them.

The sunken look, the leanness of his young face, seemed suddenly accentuated; the gloom in his discontented eyes deepened; his slight habitual stoop became more noticeable. And a second time he nodded acquiescence to his unspoken thought.

"There," said he, singling out a passer-by upon whose complacent features prosperity had set its snug hall-mark, "there, but for the grace of God, goes Nat Duncan!" He rolled the paraphrase upon his tongue and found it bitter—not, however, with a tonic bitterness. "Lord, what a worthless critter I am! No good to myself—nor to anybody else. Even on Harry I'm a drag—a regular old man of the mountains!"

Into the Surging Crowd.

Despondently he went down to the sidewalk and merged himself with the crowd, moving with it though a thousand miles apart from it, and presently diverging, struck cross-town toward the Worth street subway station.

"And the worst of it is, he's too sharp not to find it out—if he hasn't by this time—and too decent by far to let me know if he has! * * * It can't go on this way with us; I can't let him * * * Got to break with him somehow—now—today. I won't let him think me * * * what I've been all along to him * * * Bless his foolish heart! * * *"

This resolution colored his reverie throughout the uptown journey. And he strengthened himself with it, deriving a sort of acrid comfort from the knowledge that henceforth none should know the burden of his misfortunes save himself.

There was no depreciation of Kellogg's goodness in his mood, simply determination no longer to be a charge upon it. To contemplate the sum total of the benefits he had received at Kellogg's hands, since the day when the latter had found him ill and half-starved, friendless as a stray pup, on the bench in Washington square, staggered his imagination. He could never repay it, he told himself, save inadequately, little by little—mostly by gratitude and such consideration as he purposed now to exhibit by removing himself and his distresses from the other's ken.

Here was an end to comfort for him, an end to living in Kellogg's rooms, eating his food, busying his servants, spending his money—not so much borrowed as pressed upon him.

He stood at the cross roads, but in no doubt as to which way he should most honorably take, though it took him straight back to that from which Kellogg had rescued him.

Continued in to-morrow's Boston Sunday American.

Nat Duncan, caught while trying to slip away from Kellogg and his friends, who are celebrating Kellogg's good luck.

He Never Loses

By KENNETT HARRIS.

A PROPER liberality
That isn't prodigality,
A kindness
That's not blindness
I am never known to lack.
My bread I throw quite eagerly
On waters sprinkled meagrely,
Provided
I've decided
It will soon come floating back.

I treat no poor friends chillingly,
But lend to them most willingly;
It's vicious,
Injudicious
To hoard up the filthy dross.
I loathe its base impurity
And wouldn't ask security—
I'd trust 'em,
But for custom
And the chances of a loss.

You see, it's quite erroneous
To call me parsimonious.
I'm wiser
Than a miser
When he's following his bent.
Such niggardly avidity
I think is rank stupidity.
I scatter,
For that matter,
But I gather cent for cent.

Cigarette Smoking

By WINIFRED BLACK

A PROMINENT Western educator says that girls are to blame for the cigarette smoking among high school boys.

"Cigarettes are the bane of existence to every one who is interested in the youth of America," says the prominent educator. "We lecture and demonstrate against them. We forbid them with all kinds of penalties, but we can't do a thing about it: the girls will have to help us out. If every girl in America would refuse to have anything to do with a boy who smoked cigarettes, the whole matter would be settled within six months. Girls, why don't you do your duty?"

Yes, girls; why don't you?

To be sure, the prominent educator himself smokes. I saw him the other day with a most inodorous pipe in his mouth. Nine out of ten of the men who fly into a fury of protest at the sight of a cigarette smoking high school boy are smokers themselves. Yet it is the girls' fault if the boys smoke.

If the men of this country want the boys of this country to stop smoking cigarettes, they'll have to stop smoking themselves.

What woman on earth is so illogical as to do in plain sight of her daughter things which she does not want that daughter to imitate.

It is not the fault of the girl that the boys smoke cigarettes, gentlemen; it is the fault of the men.

You can't expect a boy to have more sense than his father. And you can't expect a girl to have more sense than her own father, either. Why should she be horrified at cigarettes. Her father probably smoked like a furnace the very first time he ever took her in his arms and carried her out for an airing on the porch.

Girls are not noble, self-sacrificing, high-minded creatures. They are just girls. And they are going to think that anything that is the fashion among the boys of their own particular set is just too sweet for anything, no matter what teachers or educators or doctors or employers have to say about it.

'SIX TALKS WITH THE STAGE-STRUCK GIRL'

By David Belasco

IN THE first of these talks to be published in to-morrow's Sunday American, the famous playwright and manager discusses beauty as a factor in the success of the dramatic apirant. Mr. Belasco, of course, writes most delightfully, and readers will agree no one is better equipped by natural gift and experience to illuminate this subject. Some striking illustrations.

Oh, What a Hat!

LIANE DE POUGY, the French beauty, wore it, Paris laughed at it, Prince Ghika fought over it, and now it makes its wearer a princess. And it was only three feet high. A stunning page in to-morrow's great Sunday American.

PIANO SALE

$5 Down $1 A Week

Don't get the impression that only second-hand Pianos can be had at these sales—As a matter of fact we sometimes sell the entire stock of new Pianos of some small Piano Trust dealer who, through force of circumstances, was obliged to "shut up shop," store his stock and finally let it go. We have in the course of a year hundreds of new Trust Pianos that in the "course of events" come on in the salesrooms to be sold and always at a sacrifice.

We would advise you to make up your mind to buy your Piano this week and as soon as circumstances will allow you.

Delivered free anywhere in unmarked wagons.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MAY 28, 1910.

To Preserve a Government by the Consent of the Governed, the Boston American Advocates:

First—Direct nominations, that the people may select such public servants as they deem worthy;

Second—The recall, that the people may dismiss such public servants as have proved unworthy;

Third—The initiative, that the people may compel action upon such legislation as they deem necessary;

Fourth—The referendum, that the people may accept or reject legislation as they deem desirable;

Fifth—A Corrupt Practices act that will limit election expenses to legitimate purposes and make men, and not money, the deciding force in American politics;

Sixth—Public ownership of public utilities, that the values created by the people shall belong to the people, and a referendum upon every public franchise, that no public servant shall barter the people's property for his private gain;

Seventh—The election of Senators by the people, and of Judges for short terms, that no branch of government shall feel itself too far above the people or too long removed from the people.

A Sample of Milwaukee Socialism

Is It Socialism, or Is It SIMPLE COMMON SENSE?

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

They elected a Socialist Mayor named Seidel in Milwaukee.

Strange to relate, Milwaukee seems to be going along quite cheerfully. Investigation made by this newspaper reveals the surprising fact that even the most prosperous men in Milwaukee, the richest and most influential, are quite pleased with the Socialist victory—although they voted against it. They say that, so far as they can see, they have in office honest men, whereas before they had rascals very often. And the Socialists elected suggest nothing except changes based on legislation, the latter based on majority rule.

This new Mayor, Seidel, now suggests that the city of Milwaukee interest itself in real estate investment—AND GIVE THE BENEFIT TO THE CITIZENS. He thinks that the city ought to buy acreage, lay out streets, sell factory sites and residence sites, and keep FOR THE CITY THE INCREASED VALUE OF THE LAND BASED ON THE STREET OPENINGS AND OTHER IMPROVEMENTS.

Would that be such a very bad thing, after all? We know what happens in the ordinary big American city. The city opens new streets, the people are taxed to pay for the streets, and the political gang, having advance information, buy up land where the improvements are going, AND THEY GET THE PROFITS CREATED BY THE EXPENDITURE OF PUBLIC MONEY.

Dull old London has actually done what this Socialist Mayor advocates in Milwaukee.

London opened at great expense a wide thoroughfare, giving quick communication between the "City of London," where the great bank is, and the West End.

The citizens kept for themselves the increased value of land due to the opening of the new thoroughfare. Everybody got a fair price for his land, and yet when the transaction was ended THE CITY HAD MADE A PROFIT, AND NOT A DOLLAR OF TAX WAS LAID ON THE INHABITANTS!

It is rather strange that so many American cities had to wait for a Socialist victory in Milwaukee for the suggestion from an official source that when the public spends money on city improvements the increased value resulting from such improvements SHOULD BELONG TO THE PUBLIC AND NOT TO POLITICAL BOSSES!

Failure to Personify U. S. Government

"Inability to personify the United States government," is Professor Hugo Munsterberg's diagnosis of smuggling as a disease of the rich.

Victims of these infatuations are nearly always wealthy and also victims of sudden changes of view. For instance, when a millionaire solemnly swears he has nothing dutiable in his luggage and the customs inspector unearths a $25,000 necklace, the case is clear; the owner is suffering from "inability to personify the United States government."

On the contrary, this same millionaire learns that a foreign rival is underselling him in this country, his vision becomes amazingly keen and he is able to personify the United States government as effectively as though it were his second self.

The ordinary man who pays his duty and his taxes and suffers the chances of competition calls the disease so scientifically named by the Harvard savant plain "dishonesty."

"Inability to personify the United States government" on a customs declaration makes a smuggler, just as inability to personify the truth makes a liar and inability to personify honesty makes a thief.

"The dim sense of honor is the same in the average of all classes," Professor Munsterberg declares.

Among many rich men, removed from the spectre of want that drives many poor men to steal bread for starving families, we fear it is very dim indeed.

Unfortunately, the law too often takes from the rich man that which he can spare, and lets him off with a fine, while the poor man forfeits his freedom and emerges into the world branded a felon. Yet the man who could not "personify the United States government" acted with the meanest of instincts, and the other with the noblest.

The moral seems to be that the man who can personify his own pocket all the time need fear no investigation of motive.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

CO-OPERATION

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Under the title "A Lesson in Optimism" you publish a letter from a correspondent which exactly runs counter to the spirit of your excellent editorial of May 12, in which the thriftfulness of France is contrasted with American extravagance and bad management. "If America is not a prosperous country, where may we look for prosperity on the face of the globe?" Where but in Denmark, growing immensely wealthy out of the co-operation of its farmers; in Germany, whose sons and daughters no longer emigrate because their opportunities are better at home than in the so-called land of freedom; in France, whose proud distinction of the creditor nation of the world you rightly exalt? Time to quit this patriotic buncombe that stands in the way of true American patriotism. Time to profit by the experience of more civilized nations which have more successfully cultivated the virtues of personal and collective thrift. In this State in 1909 more than 900,000 persons received help from the various private charitable institutions. More than 75,000 persons were supported wholly or in part by public charity. One-third of the population of the wealthiest American State wholly or partially pauperized! Is it strange that public-spirited men are trying to build up new thrift agencies—savings bank life insurance, credit unions, postal savings banks and the rest?

ELBERT HUBBARD'S ARTICLE

THE VALUE OF HIGHER EDUCATION

Written for the Boston American.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

Copyright, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE Higher Education has always been for the favored few.

In this it has worked two great wrongs.

It has inspired the awe and envy of those who could not go to college, fixing in their minds the fallacy that they were being deprived of something.

And, second, it has inflated the average graduate with the assumption that he had something which set him apart and fitted him to guide and govern.

When you think you have got it, you have lost it.

Success for the man with a college degree lay in perpetuating the ignorance of the many in order that he might protect and preserve his college honors.

To the simple mind a strange and unfamiliar language contains truth, which can only be obtained by acquiring this strange language.

To know the secrets of Greece or Rome you must know Greek and Latin. Therefore those who know Greek and Latin are wiser than those who do not—this is the reasoning. That truth, beauty and love are beyond language, and words are only a scheme or plan for expressing emotions, is a thing we have yet to learn. A person may speak half a dozen languages and have no ideas to express in any. This is a fact which all who have dealt with the European courier know full well.

It Is No Calamity to Be Cheated

The division of the world into ignorant and educated, literate and illiterate, bond and free, saved and lost, all tends toward tyranny, hate, strife, separation, dissolution, death.

The punishment of the liar is that he eventually believes his own lies.

And so the fallacy of the Higher Education for the few, and the struggle for the many, slips the knockout drops of weakness into the pedagogic formula, and Fate, like the Grave, puts all on a parity.

It was Emerson who first told us, and that only yesterday, that it is no calamity to be cheated. "But have a care that you do not cheat another!"

The persecuted live on and on, but the persecutor and his whole family and tribe go down to "The tongueless silence of the dreamless dust."

To educate a few and leave the many in ignorance is a temptation for the so-called educated to piece out knowledge with pretence. Any pretence is a remedial move on the part of Nature to lay the pretender low.

And so this Supreme Energy balks the hypocrite, weakens the arrogant, halts the rich. And always and forever the country boy who has warmed his feet on October mornings where the cows have lain down, goes up to the cities and takes them captive.

Boston, with her culture, books and pedigree, is ruled by the sons of Irish emigrants grown great.

Colleges Give Honors Where There Is No Merit

New York is in the hands of Jews, who divide their power with the big boys from Nebraska, Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana. And the Scotch, born in cottages on windswept heath and heather, oatmeal and haggis fed, battling with hardship and deprivation, bring their red-headed industry and economy to bear and get their full quota of every good thing, everywhere.

And thus are the vain attempts to monopolize wealth, power, knowlerge and the good things of the world ever frustrated by Nature ordering a new deal. What we want, and actually what we get, is equality in opportunity. But this would not be so if the Higher Education were a fact, not a barren ideality. "There is a Divinity that shapes our ends, rough-hew them as we will."

The college gives honors where there is no merit; position without character; rewards the unworthy; inflates the foolish; makes mention of the mediocre, and advertises nullity. As Robert Ingersoll said, "It polishes pebbles and dims diamonds."

It imparts to a nobody that standing of a somebody, and, as such, supplies a service which will probably long be in demand.

However, there are three distinct advantages in the college degree. The first is, it gives the person a chance to perpetrate his limitations as a teacher.

Next, it admits a man of mediocre ability into a certain society on a basis which a person of similar attainments could never otherwise reach. And this, it should be explained, is the society of affectation, pretense, cheese straws, tiddledy-winks and vacuous nothings, from which men and women who have work to do flee as they would from a tsetse fly.

The third advantage of the college course is that it reveals to the discerning student that there is nothing in it.

The man of genius is everywhere welcome; all doors fly open at his touch. He who has the talent to instruct, amuse or entertain needs no passport. But the person who can neither create nor produce, who can do nothing that the world wants done, and has nothing to say to which the world will listen, requires a certificate.

This social letter of credit the college undertakes to supply. It used to give out letters of marque and reprisal, but now the college degree is more or less of a pleasantry—valuable only to those who need it. One who is without either character or personality, need not feel abashed so long as he has his degree—he can yet join a university club, proudly wear the pin of his frat and rah-rah-rah! when the mood is on.

Says Herbert Spencer in his essay on "Education":

"The remark is trite that in his shop, or in his office, in managing his estate or his family, in playing his part as director of a bank or a railway, the college graduate is little aided by his knowledge he took so many years to acquire—so little, that generally the greater part of it drops out of his memory.

Our Limited Time for Acquisition

"If we inquire what the real motive is for giving boys a classical education, we find it to be simply conformity to public opinion. Men dress their children's minds as they do their bodies, in the prevailing fashion.

"A boy's drilling in Latin and Greek is insisted on, not because of their intrinsic value, but that he may not be disgraced by being found ignorant of them—that he may have the 'education of a gentleman'—the badge marking a certain social position and bringing a consequent respect.

"To get above some and be reverenced by them, and to propitiate those who are above us, in the universal struggle in which the chief energies of life are expended.

"Not what knowledge is of most real worth, is the consideration, but what will bring most applause, honor, respect—what will most conduce to social position and influence—what will be most imposing. As throughout life, not what we are, but what we shall be thought, is the question; so in education the question is not the intrinsic value of knowledge so much as its extrinsic effect on others. And this being our dominant idea, direct utility is scarcely more regarded than by the barbarian when filing his teeth and staining his nails.

"But we that have but span-long lives must ever bear in mind our limited time for acquisition. And remembering how narrowly this time is limited, not only by the shortness of life, but also still more by the business of life, we ought to be especially solicitous to employ what time we have to the greatest advantage. Before devoting years to some subject which fashion or fancy suggests, it is surely wise to weigh with great care the worth of the results which the same years might bring if otherwise applied."

Men are used as they use others—The King Who Became Just.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA brought the funniest man up to the house last night, his name was Dutch. Pa called him Old Dutch. He was a figgerer.

Dinner is all reddy, sed Ma, let us eat first.

I think it is better that we eat afterwards, sed Pa's frend. You see, lady, a man figgers better the longer there is no food in his stomach, and I am a figgerer. Please get your pencil and paper, he sed to Ma, & put down the numbers wich you like from one to ten. So Ma got the pencil & paper, but I doant think she wanted to figger. Wen she came she rote on the paper these numbers 1234569.

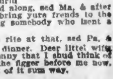
Fine, sed Pa's frend, fine. Now, what is yure favorit number? I have no favorit number, sed Ma, & besides, the dinner is getting coald. Oh, you must have a favorit number, sed Pa's frend. All rite, sed Ma, taik Number 7. Vary well, sed Old Dutch, we will now multiplication 12,345,679 by the number 63, & the answer is 777,777,777. Is that sevens enuff for you, kid? sed Pa's frend.

You mussent call my wife kid, sed Pa. She is not used to that kind of conversation. All rite, Bo, sed Old Dutch to Pa. I will call her her first name by, if she tells it to me. We will now let the dear lady pick another number. All rite, sed Ma, anything to get it over with. The dinner is getting cold. I will pick number 3. Good, vary good, sed Pa's frend. We will now multiply 12,345,679 by 27, & the answer is 333,333,333. Is that enuff threes for you, Emma?

Husband, sed Ma, will you please show this person the gate?

He is all rite, sed Pa, he is a grate figgerer. I met him at Billie's. I doant care ware you met him, sed Ma, I want my dinner & I want it now, and I will say good nite to yure charming frend.

Pa dident like to ask Mister Dutch to go, but he had to, & after the man was gone Ma cut loose on Pa. She toald Pa so many things that I cant remember half of them, but words was as thick as snowflakes and jest as cold.



Thare, thare, sed Pa, I thought maybe you wud like to meet a man of science. What wud the wurld ever have been if it hadent been for men like Rusevelt and Sir Ikey Newton & me? Pa sed.

I guess the wurld wud have struggled along, sed Ma, & after this, if you must bring yure frends to the house, try to bring somebody who isent a figgerer.

I guess you are rite at that, sed Pa, & now we will have dinner. Deer littel wife, Pa sed, it seems funny that I shud think of any figgers excep the figger before me now. Pa always gits out of it sum way.
